ADMISSION $10 (SLIDING SCALE)

Since the late 1960s Dr. Paul Ehrlich has been a bold, and tireless prognosticator on the effects of the ever-expanding human population on the health of the biosphere and the long-term prospects for the survival of our species. His work is both celebrated and reviled with a passion reserved for only the most influential thinkers.

Dr. Ehrlich will discuss his latest book, One with Nineveh (co-written with his wife and long time collaborator Anne Ehrlich). The book addresses a broad array of topics including ecology, demographics, migration, economics, biodiversity, ethics, climate, politics and globalization and suggests measures “that might allow humanity in general, and the world’s sole remaining superpower in particular, to alter course and work towards achieving a sustainable world.” Come hear for yourself the latest analysis by this giant in the field of population dynamics and global ecology.

Professor Ehrlich has been honored with numerous prestigious prizes, including the John Muir Award of the Sierra Club, the Gold Medal Award of the World Wildlife Fund International, a MacArthur Prize Fellowship, the Crafoord Prize of the Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences (given in lieu of a Nobel Prize in areas where the Nobel is not given), the Volvo Environmental Prize, the United Nations’ Sasakawa Environment Prize, the Blue Planet Prize, the Eminent Ecologist Award of the Ecological Society of America and the Distinguished Scientist Award of the American Institute of Biological Sciences.
